A man cannot save his people unless the people themselves have some manhood. A man, even if he be a Man-God, will live and die in vain for all who are voluntary slaves.

Christ cannot save you if you want to be damned; much less can any partly here.

So long as this hatred and horror shall last - ~~so~~ long as our island refuses to become, like Scotland, a contented province of her enemy, Ireland is not finally subdued. The passionate aspiration for Irish nationhood will outlive the British Empire.

My heart dwells in a little old town
By salt winds kissed,
Where a brown-sailed boat to the harbour comes—
A boat called "Morning Mist."

And I'll stay here in my little old town
By the restless sea,
For the tide that brings the fishing-boats Brings back my love to me.

Men are ever valued most for peculiar and original qualities.
A man who can only talk common-place and act according to routine, has little weight. To speak, look, and do what your own soul from its depths orders you, are credentials of greatness which all men understand and acknowledge.

Such a man's dictum has more influence than the reasoning of an imitative or common place man.

He fills his circle with confidence. He is self possessed, firm, accurate, and daring. Such men are the pioneers of civilization and the rulers of the human heart.

You love them still the best,

The fearless brave who fighting fall,

Upon your hapless breast.
